

FourDayWeek

#better4everyone

Four Day Week Ireland is a campaign coalition of trade unions, businesses, environmentalists, women's rights and civil society organisations, academics, and health practitioners advocating for a gradual, steady, managed transition to a shorter working week for all workers, in the private and public sectors.

We want to start a public conversation in Ireland on the case for reduced working hours. We want to change the false narrative that working long hours is good for productivity.

Our medium term objective is to move towards the four day week being the standard work arrangement across the economy, with no loss of pay.

We believe that this is not only achievable but essential as a response to technological change – preparing for the future, and sharing the benefits with workers.

The four day week is an idea whose time has come. If you share our ambition, then please get involved and support our campaign, and together, we can win a four day week.
